New Speaking Test*

Format of the Speaking Test

Type of Task: Candidates participate in a decision-making task. A candidate works with one other candidate in the paired format or with two other candidates in the three-way format. Each administration of the Speaking Test is organized to have an even number of candidates to ensure the use of the paired format. However, in the event that one candidate of a pair is absent, the three-way format is used. Each candidate is given descriptions of two different options. Candidates collaborate to decide on, to present, and to defend a single option.

Stage 1 Introductions and Small Talk (3-5 minutes)

Examiner 1 begins with introductions and then initiates a conversation on general topics (e.g., hometown, leisure activities) with candidates. Candidates are expected to actively participate in the conversation by providing expanded responses and also by asking each other and Examiner 1 questions.

The goal of Stage 1 is for Examiner 1 and the candidates to introduce themselves and for candidates to become comfortable interacting with each other.

Stage 2 Summarizing and Recommending (5-7 minutes)

For this stage, each candidate is given an information sheet with descriptions of two options (for a total of four different options in the paired format). Candidates are allowed to keep the information sheet during the test and can take notes on their information sheet if they wish. They do not have to memorize the information. During Stages 2 and 3, candidates are NOT permitted to see their partner's information sheet. Candidates are given 2-3 minutes to read through the information.

Candidates then take turns summarizing the descriptions of their two options to each other. Candidates should summarize the information and NOT just read the list of features under an option. They must listen carefully to each other during the summarizations because afterwards candidates will make a recommendation to their partner of the best option from the two options presented by their partner. Candidates may take notes while their partner is summarizing.

After candidates have presented an oral summary of their information and received a recommendation from their partner, they silently choose one of their own options and think of reasons why that option is the best. There is not only one correct answer – all of the options are possible. At this point in the paired-format test, four options have been narrowed to two.

The goal of Stage 2 is for candidates to learn what all the options are, to make a recommendation to their partner, and to choose silently one of their own options as the best.

Stage 3 Consensus Reaching (5-7 minutes)

For this stage of the Speaking Test, candidates report to their partner which one of their own two options they think is the best. The candidates then compare and contrast the options they have individually chosen and discuss the advantages and disadvantages of each option. Candidates are still not allowed to look at each other's piece of paper.

The goal of Stage 3 is for the two candidates to come to an agreement on one single option.

Stage 4 Presenting and Convincing (5-7 minutes)

For this stage of the test, candidates formally present the option they have chosen to Examiner 2, who takes on the role of a person of relatively high status (for example, Examiner 2 may be the principal of a school that needs to hire a new teacher). Candidates are given 2-3 minutes to collaborate and plan the short presentation. At this point, they may look at each other's paper if they wish. Each candidate presents two different reasons for deciding on a particular option and explains why those reasons are important.

The goal of Stage 4 is for the candidates to present and to convince Examiner 2 that the option they have chosen is the best one.

Stage 5 Justifying and Defending (5-7 minutes)

During this stage, Examiner 2 questions the candidate about the decision they have made and about the reasons for that decision.

The goal of Stage 5 is for each candidates to address Examiner 2's challenges and to justify and defend the reasons for the decision.

Number of Examiners: There are two examiners present during the entire test. Examiner 1 conducts Stages 1 through 4. Examiner 2 participates during Stage 4 and Stage 5. Throughout the majority of the test, the participation of the examiners is minimal. During Stage 1 and Stage 5, the examiners will be participants in the speaking activity. However, examiner involvement during Stages 2 through 4 does not extend beyond giving directions and answering questions pertaining to test directions.

1 DISCUSSION

- What is your opinion of this painting?
- Do you know who painted it?
- Which other famous artists do you know of?

2 CLOZE / READING PRACTICE

a Choose the correct words to complete this short text about the famous artist, Pablo Picasso.

Even though his name is usually associated (1) to / with Cubism, Picasso did in fact produce a wide variety of works throughout his long life (he lived to be 92 years old). Acknowledged as being the most gifted painter of the twentieth century, he also (2) displayed / indicated a talent for sculpture and poetry.

(3) None / Few painters have been as prolific as Picasso, who was a self-confessed workaholic. It is (4) estimated / assessed that he produced in excess of 13,000 paintings!

Despite this enormous output, Picasso was able to avoid repetition in his work by (5) transferring / altering his style. It seems that each change represented things that he was being influenced by at that (6) particular / certain time. The somber (7) nature / character of the artist's paintings during his "Blue Period" (8) distracted / reflected the human misery he saw on the streets of Paris. When he began to paint circus scenes, which he (9) obviously / mostly enjoyed, he used predominantly pink tones. This was known as his "Rose Period".

Next came Cubism. This was an analytical style of painting which Picasso developed with Braque, a fellow artist. It involved (10) breaking / splitting down and analyzing the form of the painting's (11) object / subject in terms of its shape. In the beginning, the paintings were monochromatic; only later did the artists experiment with color. The style was perfected through a process of trial and (12) error / mistake, and Cubism - as we know it today - was born.

b Answer the following questions.

- 1 What did Picasso do in order not to repeat any of his earlier work?
- 2 What affected Picasso's work?
- 3 How would you describe the difference between Picasso's "Blue" and "Rose" periods?

c Choose the correct answer according to the text.

17 READING – Exam Style

This short biography of Rembrandt comes from an art magazine.

Rembrandt, one of the greatest painters of all time, was also a deeply religious man. Born on July 15, 1606, he was the son of a prominent miller and spent his formative years in the small Dutch town of Leiden. Rembrandt's father was adamant that his son should go into political office, and to this effect he sent him to the Municipal Latin School with a view to his later attending university. However, political events forced Rembrandt to leave the school in his last year, and he was immediately apprenticed to Swanenburgh, an experienced painter.

Under Swanenburgh's guidance, Rembrandt learned how to seek inspiration from other forms of art and to make studies of stuffed animals. After a few years he became apprenticed to another artist, Lastman, from whom he learned to paint still lifes and portraits as well as biblical and mythological scenes. Many of the skills and techniques Rembrandt learned from Lastman were apparent in his work and later became his trademarks, earning him the respect and adulation of other artists.

When his apprenticeship ended, Rembrandt entered into partnership with another artist, and by 1629 the two painters were accepting commissions from the Prince of Orange in The Hague. This lucrative partnership – and the commissions - ended in 1633, when Rembrandt moved to Amsterdam. There, he struck up a friendship with a successful painter, Uylenburg, and was later to marry his sister who bore him a son, although she tragically died soon after in 1642. Despite inheriting her wealth, Rembrandt fell heavily into debt, and with the outbreak of war in the Dutch Republic in 1652, he turned to his common-law wife and his son to protect him from his creditors. In 1668, Rembrandt's son died. A year later, in 1669, penniless and with his only heir a child borne to him by his common-law wife, he himself died at the age of 63.

- 1. Rembrandt was famous for ...
 - a his depictions of animals.
 - b techniques he learned from one of his tutors.
 - c his studies of other paintings.
 - d his inspiration.
- 2. Which of the following is stated in the passage?
 - a Rembrandt's wife was well-off.
 - b Rembrandt had an argument with the Prince of Orange.
 - c Rembrandt remarried after his first wife died.
 - d Rembrandt had one child.
- 3. Which of the following is mentioned about Rembrandt?
 - a He quit school to study art.
 - b He worked as a miller before becoming a painter.
 - c He did not follow the career his father had wanted.
 - d He left school because of his political ideology.
- 4. Before moving to Amsterdam, Rembrandt ...
 - a was paid to do specific paintings.
 - b became friends with Uylenburg.
 - c studied under the Prince of Orange.
 - d met the woman he would later marry.
- 5. Which of the following is not true?

a Choose the correct words to complete this short text about graffiti.

The word graffiti is (1) derived / deduced from an Italian word meaning "scratched" and refers to anything from casual markings to elaborate wall paintings scrawled on visible surfaces. Graffiti is perceived (2) to / by many as unsightly damage or vandalism.

Graffiti has existed since ancient times, with examples going back to ancient Greece and the Roman Empire. Another (3) notional / notable example of graffiti from the past is Lord Byron's inscription of his own name on one of the columns of the Temple of Poseidon at Cape Sounion in Greece.

Modern graffiti art (4) evolved / founded in New York, with spray paint and permanent markers (5) being / having the most commonly used materials, and subway trains a very popular target. The trend caught on in the 1960s following the appearance throughout the city of "TAKI 183". This was the tag of a Greek-American youth named Demetrius who drew widespread media attention to himself, thus causing graffiti to gain in popularity.

Although mostly used by kids to gain personal recognition amongst their peers, graffiti is sometimes employed to (6) converge / convey political messages and raise social issues. To some, it is a valid art form associated with the youth subculture and an outlet for creative self-expression. (7) Likewise / However, the general consensus is that graffiti defaces the urban environment, with governments (8) occurring / incurring huge costs for clean-(9) up / away and prevention. In most countries, defacing property (10) without / by the owner's consent constitutes vandalism, an offense punishable by law.

Despite the widespread conviction that graffiti is a violation of property rights, there is an avid minority who maintain that graffiti is a valid art form that often demonstrates artistic talent worthy of display.

b Answer the following questions.

- 4 The artist's work reflects the _____ between the various influences in her life.
- 5 A change in social attitudes was at the _____ of the movement.

This passage about Surrealism comes from a textbook.

The Beginnings of Surrealism

Surrealism, an intellectual movement that originated in the early 1920s, reached its height during the years between the two World Wars and enjoyed a brief comeback in the post-World War II years. France, and particularly the city of Paris, had always been the spiritual home of the movement, but during the 1920s and 1930s Surrealist groups emerged in many other European cities before reaching the shores of the U.S.A., Japan and Mexico. By the 1960s, the movement had practically died out, after having first spread its influence throughout the world.

Many of the movement's first supporters had belonged to an earlier movement known as Dada. Although this pre-dated Surrealism, for a short period the two movements coexisted. They both denounced conventional bourgeois attitudes and aimed to bring about great changes in cultural practices, but adopted distinctly different strategies. At the core of the Dada movement lay protest, subversion and rebellion, whereas the Surrealists embraced a psychoanalytic approach so as to bring about a more intellectual revolution.

The word "Surrealism" was coined by the French writer Apollinaire, who used it to describe a production of Jean Cocteau's ballet Parade. He felt the work revealed a truth beyond the real and called this "a kind of sur-realism". The term, however, was soon to be adopted by Andre Breton, also a French writer, to describe the activities of a new literary and artistic movement. Breton can be viewed as the founding father of the Surrealist movement as certain personal experiences of his were ultimately to shape the underlying ideology of Surrealism.

Unlike many of his generation, Breton had not seen active duty in World War I. All the same, the conflict had not escaped his attention as he had served as a medical orderly in a psychiatric ward where he encountered patients suffering from shell shock. His work introduced him to the theories and beliefs of Freud, the father of psychoanalysis. A perusal of Freud's work afforded him insights from early attempts, through such techniques as hypnotism, to unlock the inner workings of a tormented mind.

The Freudian psychologists valued these techniques as a part of their therapeutic treatment. For Breton, however, they were more than a means of alleviating the suffering of the mentally scarred casualties of an atrocious war. He was more fascinated by this potential method of accessing a new kind of reality - the reality of the inner mind - which he felt sure would be more intense and less controlled by the strictures of society.

- 1. According to the text, the importance of Surrealism ...
 - a was limited to the years immediately after World War II.
 - b was global in nature.
 - c was restricted to the years between World War I and II.
 - d did not survive until the 1960s.
- 2. What do we learn about Breton?
 - a He was an associate of Freud.
 - b He had an interest in psychoanalysis.
 - c He served in the armed forces during the First World War.
 - d He was the first to hypnotise psychiatric patients.

 - a extended beyond the field of medicine.
 - b was short-lived.
 - c was restricted by the rules of society.
 - d found disfavor among Freudian psychologists.
- 4. What do we learn about Dada and Surrealism?
 - a They condemned all existing cultural practices.
 - b They sought to bring about different changes.
 - c They had similar goals.
 - d They belonged to separate times.
- 5. What do we learn about Apollinaire?

As a matter of fact, many of his studies (9) ______ the developments of modern technology.

3 SPEAKING [See Functional Language at back of book.]

STAGE 1: Introductions and Small Talk Answer the questions.

- 1 Have you ever been to a museum? Which one(s)?
- 2 What kind of art do you like? Why?
- 3 Which famous painters do you know of?
- 4 Should more emphasis be placed on the arts in schools? Why?
- 5 Does the government in your country do enough to promote the arts? Explain.

STAGE 2: Summarizing and Recommending

Imagine that you and your partner are teachers at a local high school in town and you have to decide which art exhibition to take a group of students to next week. Four exhibitions have made it to the final selection and relevant information has been provided. Each of you has information about two of the four exhibitions. This information can be found on page 22 (Student A) and page 299 (Student B).

- Do not look at each other's sheets.
- Summarize (paraphrase) the information you have been given about the exhibitions to each other - do not just read the list of information under each exhibition. You may take notes while your partner is speaking.
- Recommend one of the exhibitions that your partner has presented to you.
- Regardless of which exhibition your partner recommends, silently make your own choice as well.

STAGE 3: Consensus Reaching For this stage you will

- tell each other which exhibition you have chosenfrom your own two options.
- compare and contrast your choices.
- discuss the advantages and disadvantages of each choice.
- come to an agreement on one single option.

STAGE 4: Presenting and Convincing

Your teacher will now take on the role of a person of relatively high status such as the principal of your school. You and your partner must

- collaborate with each other to formally present the option you have both agreed upon, giving two different reasons each. You may now look at each other's information sheets, if you wish.
- convince your teacher that the exhibition you have agreed upon is the best choice.

STAGE 5: Justifying and Defending

In this final stage, your teacher will question you about the decision you have made and the reasons behind it. You will both address your teacher's questions. Your goal here is to justify and defend your decision.

8 WRITING

Choose the correct word.

Can Art Be Taught?

The issue as to whether art can be taught is quite a (1) considerate / controversial one in the contemporary art world. Some believe that it is (2) feasible / practical, whereas others are adamant that art is purely a matter of talent. Personally, I feel that it all depends on what you class as "art".

To begin with, art involves far more than the production of a pretty picture. In fact, the dictionary itself (3) defines / specifies it as the ability to use the imagination to express ideas or feelings. This suggests that art has less to do with genius than it does with creativity. This is where the teaching of art comes in. Here, the student is shown how to open his mind to visual (4) provocation / stimulation. In other words, he can be taught to see, even if his ordinary way of seeing is inadequate.

This brings us back to our original question. Can those who only dabbled in childish drawing at school learn art? It is often argued that few adults ever progress beyond this (5) stage / section since art instruction usually comes to a(n) (6) abrupt / brief end once a student finishes school. It would seem that while the mechanics of picking up a brush and splashing color onto a canvas are important, the capacity to (7) savor / flavor visual delights takes precedence over this. Hence the significance of good instruction.

In the professional art world, on the other hand, there are those who attribute art to nothing less than natural ability. Not having been schooled in their area of discipline, they refuse to even (8) entertain / occupy the notion that art can be taught. To support their argument, they point to the inspiring works of self-taught artists such as Rousseau and Van Gogh which are, after all, (9) noticeably / prominently displayed in the world's finest art galleries. To my mind, however, these artists are among the fortunate minority who have managed to perfect their art unassisted.

To sum up, while I recognize that certain people do have a flair for art, I take great (10) acceptance / exception to the snobbery that prevails in the art world. As far as I am concerned, some people are naturally talented while others need help to master the skills. However, since both are able to use their imagination to express ideas or feelings, they should both be classed as artists and their success is limited only by their imagination.

Now, read the text again and answer the following questions.

- 1 According to the opinions expressed by the writer of the text, would it be possible to teach somebody to paint a picture as good as this?
- 2 Say whether you agree with the writer's opinion and why.

While some people believe that graffiti is a form of art, there are those who only see it as an act of vandalism and wish to fine retailers who sell graffiti tools to minors.

In your opinion, should graffiti be seen as a form of self-expression or as a crime for which offenders should be prosecuted?

Discuss, giving specific examples to support your point of view.

Write your essay in about 250-300 words.

Words, Words, Words!

1 Do you know the meaning of the words in bold?

Adept at copying sculptures, John accepted a job at a museum and was assigned the arduous task of reproducing authentic artwork from the archaic period. He worked under the alias of A.J., an abbreviation of the assumed name "Apple Jack". Soon his copies of famous sculptures were being assessed and sold for thousands; the director allocated John an ample allowance which, allied with his austere lifestyle and abstinence from alcohol, led to his affluence. This wealth, in conjunction with his audacious, assertive manners, accounted for his co-workers' absence of affection for him and also for the alacrity with which they believed allegations of doubtful accuracy that he had assaulted and abducted a copyist from a rival museum. Such an affront to its reputation the museum would never tolerate. John now teaches pottery at the state Prison.

Words, Words, Words!

Although he was the subject of caustic ridicule by conservative art critics during his lifetime, the celebrated Vincent Van Gogh is today cherished as much for his captivating paintings as for his personal charisma. Critics are capricious. It may be convenient to simply charge them with being banal and unimaginative and leave it at that. In any case, a new chapter in contemporary art history opened when less cautious commentators, to whom the kind of art that caters to our taste for the irrational was more congenial, became conscious of Van Gogh's influence. Even now, there are clumsy attempts to categorize his work as Expressionist or Post-Impressionist, but these easily collapse when challenged. Only when we confront Van Gogh not as a crank, but as a man of contradictory impulses in constant conflict, can we benefit from his vision.

ON COURSE for the MICHIGAN ECPE offers a systematic approach to the acquisition of the English language at proficiency level. The book contains comprehensive coverage of the four sections (GCVR, Writing, Speaking and Listening) which comprise the Michigan ECPE, providing students with:

- topic-related, level-appropriate Cloze and Reading texts, designed to elicit maximum student response in the areas of comprehension, textual analysis and linguistic content.
- extensive practice in advanced lexical items such as derivatives, related words, confusable words, idioms, prepositions, phrasal verbs, synonyms, antonyms and collocations.
- vocabulary exercises to aid students in what is considered to be the most demanding part of the Michigan examination, as well as a special section presenting vocabulary in alphabetical order.
- grammar sections that enable students to review key grammar phenomena with particular emphasis on difficult grammar points.
- carefully planned writing sections including full-length essay tasks giving sufficient help and guidance to enable students to convey their ideas fluently and effectively.
- ample opportunity to practice the multi-stage, semi-structured speaking activities described in the new specifications.
- sufficient exposure to naturally-spoken American English to enable students to cope with the demands of the listening section.

Each lesson has been designed to build on and recycle students' knowledge, helping them build up the confidence to use English with accuracy and fluency.

After completing ON COURSE for the Michigan ECPE, students should continue with the New Generation Practice Tests for the Michigan ECPE. This book will assist candidates in consolidating the material they have been taught while providing them with a thorough preparation for the examination.
